

KNIFESTYLES OF THE RICH & FAMOUS

2007

Leah Remini has never been afraid to tell it like it is — even when her appearance is the subject in question! Case in point: After a Twitter troll criticized her lips, she replied: “Actually, my lips are real. Maybe it’s the Botox you don’t like? But thank you for your nasty a-- tweet.” She’s right to be confident: At 46, Leah looks great — but docs agree that she should ease up on the Botox before she ruins a good thing. “Her forehead is overdone,” asserts

“Her forehead is a bit over-Botoxed.”

— Dr. Lyle Back

Philadelphia-based plastic surgeon Dr. Lyle Back, who has not treated Leah. “Her eyebrows have been raised into a Joker kind of look.” Adds NYC-based dermatologist Dr. Kally Papantoniou, who also has not treated the star, “Her eyelids look heavy, which could be from Botox being placed too low on the forehead.” But Leah looks youthful overall, possibly thanks to a few other tweaks. “Her skin is glowing and even, which could be the result of regular chemical peels,” says Dr. Papantoniou, adding that Leah may also have had fillers beneath her eyes. “For a 10-year difference,” she says, “she really looks great!” LS

SKIN

“It’s possible Leah has had a skin-firming treatment, such as Ultherapy,” says San Francisco-based plastic surgeon Dr. Larry Fan. Price tag? $4K every two or three years.

EYES

Dermatologist Dr. Papantoniou suggests Leah’s had fillers under her eyes. Treatments typically cost between $400 and $1K.

LIPS

Dr. Back says Leah’s pout looks “classically” ill-treated. “The lower lip is inflated all the way across,” he notes, “and the upper lip lacks a defined border.” Lip fillers — which Leah’s denied — can cost up to $1K per treatment.

CHIN

Leah’s heart-shaped face could be the result of a chin enhancement using fillers, which costs about $1K and would need to be done once a year, says Dr. Fan. “Her chin is more shapely now,” he notes.
