KNIFESTYLES OF THE RICH & FAMOUS

he last 12 years haven't exactly been the easiest for troubled star Lindsay Lohan, who's gone from girl next door to aged beyond her years at just 30. But so far, her efforts to reverse the clock - and undo some of the damage from her hard-partying days - are yielding mixed results. "I think she looks pretty good," says cosmetic dermatologist Dr. Tabasum Mir, who doesn't treat the actress. "Filler under eyes has filled out the hollows and also softened her nasolabial folds (laugh lines)." But Dr.

"She's had a little too much filler."

- Dr. Lyle M. Back

Mir believes she's had too much Botox in her forehead "which is making her eyes look smaller and hooded." And Philadelphia-area plastic surgeon Dr. Lyle M. Back, who doesn't treat the star, thinks Lindsay is overdoing it with "a little too much filler" in her cheeks and lips. It might be time for Lindsay to ease up on the injectables and focus more on her skin, which is aging her dramatically. "It has a weathered, harsh look," says Dr. Back, who suggests laser resurfacing: "It would make her skin softer, smoother and much more pleasant-looking!" W
